Wichita medical students learn residency matches

WICHITA, KAN. – Throughout their fourth year, medical students have interviewed for residency programs across the state and throughout the country, and have ranked their choices. Likewise, residency programs have ranked the students they most want to invite into their program. This process culminates on Match Day, when students learn which residency program they are matched with, and what part of the country they will move to for the next phase of their training.

Today during Match Day, fourth-year students at the KU School of Medicine-Wichita learned where they will complete their residency training.

Of the 79 soon-to-be graduates, 32 will stay in Kansas to train through the Wichita Center for Graduate Medical Education.

Approximately half of this year's graduates will go into a primary care field (family medicine, internal medicine, pediatrics) and 4 matched to surgery residency programs.

The University of Kansas School of Medicine-Wichita educates tomorrow's physicians and health care leaders through community partnership. We doctor Kansas.
